YOUNG PEOPLE MIGRATE SEARCHING THEIR FUTURE

Migration of people is necessary for countries economically strong. Nowadays, migrating is the only option for many young people that need a job. However there are advantages and disadvantages with this situation.

On the one hand, there are many young people who have studied for many years at university to become a professional and they've spent a lot of money on their education. However at the end, they cannot find a job in their own country therefore, they have to move to other places. From my point of view this is beneficial for them because they can achieve their objective, and consequently, they get the opportunity of having a better level of living than being at home without any job. In addition to this, visiting a foreign country give them the chance to have new experiences, to know how people live in other parts of the world and it also opens doors to different cultures. Moreover, the best way to learn a foreign language is to migrate to a country where it is spoken. Another advantage is that they may meet new people with a different outlook of their own.

There is strong evidence to suggest that this situation is similar to what happened fifty years ago, when many people from Spain moved to Germany, due to the fact that its economy was growing and they needed people to fill the new jobs that were created. Many people from my region went to work abroad at that time and now something similar it's happening again.

On the other hand, migrating to another country has also some disadvantages:
Firstly it's necessary to learn a new language and at first it's always very difficult. Apart from this there are a lot of cultural differences between countries, some are small but others can be bigger and produce misunderstandings among immigrants and local people. For this reason they are forced to accept a new culture and learn how to behave in new situations.
Secondly, emigrants have to leave their families and friends behind when they move away from home to a new place. This is essential but hard, because they lose their main support. The result is they have to make new friends and this is complicated if you are working and you don't know the language very well.
Finally one has to adapt to new climates and new geographies. This can be interesting, but it also brings problems because there are countries which have very different weather from where they come from. Immigrants have to acclimatize to the new conditions which can take time and cause illness.

In conclusion there are many countries that are losing young talents, due to the fact that, they cannot offer them a good level of life. Having shown my reasons I can say that this situation is hard but it's also beneficial for them. It's difficult to adapt to living to a new country and culture but young people are not afraid of the new challenges that, undoubtedly, will help us to grow.

Sources: elpaís.com/tag/ migration/ a / wikipedia.org/wiki/Wikipedia

www. migrationinformation.org

Sara Calderón

IES Turgalium. Trujillo. Spain